

StuKol 2024

Call for Papers

StuKol stands for Studierendenkonferenz Informatik (engl. Student Conference Informatics) and was initiated in collaboration with Professor Weyers and the Computer Science Student Council (Fachschaftsrat) at the University of Trier. The aim of the conference is to offer students the opportunity to present their own projects and to gain valuable experience in dealing with scientific conferences.

1. When and where?

On May 3rd, 09:00, in the chapel K101 and HZ201 on Campus II Workshops will take place in the morning, followed by project presentations in the afternoon.

2. Submission deadline

The event will be bilingual, so you can submit your contributions in either German or English. Projects need to be submitted in a processed report of about 2 DIN A4 pages by April 12th here: <https://survey.fachschaften.org/843925>. Your contributions will then be reviewed by us, and you will receive feedback with confirmation of your participation by April 17th at the latest. You have until April 29th to create a poster and a slide for your project and send them to us. We will cover the costs of printing the poster!

3. What about the workshops?

Alternatively, you can offer workshops if your project allows it in terms of content and concept. The workshop does not have to be related to a specific project. Topics, such as "How do I structure my thesis?" or "How do I deal with exam anxiety?". Workshops can also aim for constructive discussion or the development of a topic. To register a workshop, please submit an abstract with the objective of the workshop, as well as a schedule. One to two DIN A4 pages are sufficient. Please adhere to the submission deadlines mentioned above.

4. How does the evaluation work?

Your projects will be evaluated on-site by the visitors of the conference. If they like your presentation, they can stick a Koi sticker on your poster. The three presentations with the most Koi stickers will each receive a prize.

5. Will there be refreshments?

We will provide you with coffee, soft drinks, and pastries free of charge!
